School of Law

Areas of Specialisation:

Constitution Law, Intellectual Property Rights, Labour Laws

Dr. Shobha Rani. M is a legal academic, researcher, and educator with research interests spanning Intellectual Property Rights, Artificial Intelligence and Constitutional Law, Administrative Law, Criminal Justice, and Access to Justice. Her scholarly work focuses on emerging legal challenges arising from technological advancements, particularly generative artificial intelligence, digital sovereignty, copyright authorship, digital evidence, and ethical AI governance. She has been actively engaged in research publications and contributions to edited volumes addressing contemporary legal developments and interdisciplinary legal issues. Her research explores the intersection of law, technology, human rights, and social justice, with particular emphasis on the Indian legal framework and comparative perspectives. As an academic, she is involved in postgraduate teaching, research supervision, curriculum development, and experiential legal education. She also contributes to legal aid initiatives, community outreach programmes, and student-centred academic activities aimed at promoting legal awareness and access to justice. Her academic approach integrates doctrinal legal research, contemporary case-law analysis, and practical applications of law to strengthen critical thinking and legal scholarship.
